THE CIVIL WAR IN AMERICA: CONFEDERATES TRAPPING A BOAT'S CREW OF THE POTOMAC FLEET.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

A severe time since the United States' deep blockade, while making the Virginia shore of the Potomac, detached a boat to take possession of a row that lay hard and fast in the mud, laden with stores, supposed by the commander to contain powder for the use of the Flimblebee. Just as the boatman was preparing to haul on with the boathook a murderous fire was opened from behind the bushes on the bank, killing and wounding all but one at the first discharge. It was nothing more than a ruse to draw the Flimblebee on, and it succeeded too well. With great difficulty the boat was got out of range by those able to swim the oars, and shortly afterwards the Flimblebee came up and shelled the woods, but with what execution it is impossible to say.
