

How Far Across The River: Chinese Policy Reform At The Millennium

Development
and Change

Published on behalf of the Institute of Social Studies, The Hague

Beyond the Enclave: Towards a Critical Political Economy of China and Africa

Giles Mohan

ABSTRACT

This article provides a political economy framework for analysing China's engagements with Africa. It situates the rise of China in the context of the changing balance of power in the world system and particularly China's re-entry into spheres of influence in Africa that have been the purview of the former European colonial powers for two centuries or more. It begins by arguing that current approaches to China, Africa and international relations are fragmented in particular ways which prevent the development of a more critical political economy. It then examines a pervasive theme in China-Africa relations, which assumes that the Chinese work through enclaved investments to secure the resources of low-income economies, though in this sense the Chinese are no different from other investors. Where they do differ is in their bundling of aid, trade and FDI and their use of imported labour, which has been termed 'surgical colonialism'. The article does not dispute the existence of Chinese enclaves but argues that we need more empirical evidence on the levels of labour importation in relation to local labour market conditions. This requires a more nuanced understanding of state-capital dynamics in those countries where the Chinese operate although the model appears to be one of elite brokerage. However, the enclaved investments and inter-elite bargaining are only part of the story and the closing sections of the article analyse the role of independent Chinese businesses in Africa's social and political development, which moves us beyond the enclave.

INTRODUCTION

While the 'China in Africa' story has been headlines for nearly a decade (e.g. Hilsun, 2006) there have been relatively few attempts to theorize what this means for the political economy of international development (Alden and Large, 2011; Ayers, 2013; Campbell, 2008; Tull, 2006). Much of what has been written is theory as hypothetical conjecture which posits

I would like to acknowledge the support of the UK Economic and Social Research Council in funding the research project (Refs: RES-062-23-0487 and RES-075-25-0019) from which this article derives. More details are available at www.geography.dur.ac.uk/projects/china-africa/ and <http://risingpowers.open.ac.uk/>. The comments of the anonymous reviewers were really helpful in shaping this paper.

Development and Change 44(6): 1255-1272. DOI: 10.1111/dech.12061
© 2013 International Institute of Social Studies.
Published by John Wiley & Sons Ltd, 9600 Garsington Road, Oxford OX4 2DQ, UK and 350 Main St., Malden, MA 02148, USA

The experts who contributed to this volume tackle many aspects of that question, assessing Chinese progress in policy reform, priorities for further reform, and How Far across the River?: Chinese Policy Reform at the Millennium. Nicholas C. Hope, Dennis Tao Yang, Mu Yang Li. Chinese policy reform at the millennium / edited by Nicholas C. Hope, Dennis Tao Yang, and How much can regional integration do to unify China's markets ?. This book takes its defining theme from Deng Xiaoping's famous metaphor for gradual reform: "feeling the stones to cross the river." How far has China? An excellent examination of many of the crucial issues characterizing China's transition to a market economy. The book will be of great value not only to those. How far has China progressed in fording the river? assessing Chinese progress in policy reform, priorities for further reform, and the research still needed to. How Far Across the River?: Chinese Policy Reform at the Millennium Nicholas C. Hope, Dennis Tao Yang, Mu Yang Li Snippet view - ?8?13? How far has China progressed in fording the river? assessing Chinese progress in policy reform, priorities for further reform, and the research. China's experience with reform since the 's illustrates how new ideas can foster opposition and yet still lead to adaptation. From the early 's to Chinese Policy Reform at the Millennium Nicholas Hope, Dennis Yang, Mu Li Deng Xiaoping's widely quoted phrase, "crossing the river by groping for stones. Gradual change has been a hallmark of the Chinese reform experience, and China's success in its sequential approach makes it unique. How Far Across The River Chinese Policy Reform At The Millennium - In this site is not the same as a answer manual you buy in a stamp album accretion or. in N.C. Hope, D.T. Yang and M.Y. Li (eds), How Far Across the River: Chinese Policy Reform at the Millennium, Stanford, CA: Stanford University Press. Nyberg .127 in Hope, Yang, and Li, How Far Across the River? Chinese Policy Reform at the Millennium, Stanford: Stanford University Press, , pp. 46. For more. Hope, N., Yang, T.D., and Li, M.Y. (eds) () Agenda for Future Research, in How Far Across the River?: Chinese Policy Reform at the Millennium, Stanford. Hope, N., Yang, T. and Li, M. () How Far Across the River? Chinese Policy Reform at the Millennium. Stanford: Stanford University Press. Huang, J., Lin, J. DOWNLOAD: How Far Across The River Chinese Policy Reform At The Millennium. Searching for many sold publication or reading resource HOW FAR. How Far Across The River Chinese Policy Reform At The Millennium - In this site is not the similar as a answer encyclopedia you purchase in a cd deposit or. (). How Far Across the River? Chinese Policy Reform at the Millennium, co- editors with. Nick Hope and Mu Y. Li, Stanford, U.S.A.: Stanford. Crossing the river by feeling the stones Approaches to Sustainable Urban . described the policy of incremental land reform in China as crossing the The idea with the case study was not so much to solve the future problems in Xuzhou. The objective of the Millennium Development Goals is to eradicate poverty in .

[\[PDF\] Congenital Heart Diseases The Catheterization Manual](#)

[\[PDF\] Sweeter Than All The World](#)

[\[PDF\] Species II: A Novel](#)

[\[PDF\] The Foot Doctor: Lifetime Relief For Your Aching Feet](#)

[\[PDF\] Assessing The National Pandemic Flu Preparedness Plan: Hearing Before The Committee On Energy And Co](#)

[\[PDF\] A Heart Most Worthy](#)

[\[PDF\] Dracula: Trapped In Transylvania](#)