Cross-cultural and diversity management intersections: lessons for attracting and retaining international assignees

Dimitria Groutsis, Eddy S. Ng and Mustafa Bilgehan Ozturk

■ Learning objectives

- To explain talent mobility in a culturally diverse global context, including issues such as attraction, retention and post-settlement adjustment.
- To describe the layers of culture and delineate their workplace implications.
- To explain cross-cultural management by focusing on cultural dimensions.
- To explain cultural diversity at individual and organisational levels.
- To demonstrate the value of employing a multilevel approach to explaining cross-cultural management and diversity management.

■ Learning outcomes

After reading this chapter, students will be able to:
- understand diversity management more broadly than has been presented in the literature to date
- understand cross-cultural dimensions beyond the macro-level measures presented in the dominant literature
- apply the insights gained from three levels of analysis: the macro (national culture), meso (organisation) and micro (individual and inter- and intragroup)
- address the implications of cross-cultural issues and workplaces staffed by people from diverse backgrounds around the globe
- understand how cross-cultural management and diversity management shape staffing, post-settlement adjustment and retention rates.
